COCKTAILS

OLD FASHIONED

Before the term 'Old Fashioned' came about (around the 1870s) we just had the 'Cocktail'. In this period; tea and citrus were luxury items; particularly if you were an American colonist. Hence, the most common way of taming the bite of a grain distillate was to add sugar and water. This spirit-sugar-water concoction became known as a 'Sling'. Concurrently, bitters came to prominence as a medicinal cure-all. As such, if one was to 'fall ill' – as a result of over-imbibing – the cure for your hangover was to add bitters to your Sling.

The cocktail was born.

As the art of Mixology progressed through the 1800s – to make it clear one meant to order a drink that was spirit-sugar-bitters – punters would ask for a "cocktail made the old fashioned way". Of the famous Jerry Thomas's (Considered the father of American Mixology) original thirteen recipes; six are for combinations of spirits, sugar, bitters and (frozen) water. Below you'll find a selection of Celtic Whiskey Bar Old Fashioneds; as we fuse the old with the new.
